Listening Exchanges

Working together with a team at the Global Centre on Healthcare and Urbanisation at Kellogg College, we conducted ten 'Listening Exchanges' among citizens of East Oxford, focussed on Low Traffic Neighbourhoods (LTNs).

In the Listening Exchanges, two people with clearly divergent views listened carefully to each other, reflecting back a summary of what they had heard, and shared their own lived experience. The idea was to assess whether such Listening Exchanges could reduce polarisation. Further details are in the report.
